COATING THE OBELISK.

Cleopatra's Needle Is About to Receive Paraffine and Wax.

Workmen have been busy for several days erecting scaffolding about Cleopatra's Needle in Central Park, preparatory to giving the obelisk a thorough coat of paraffine and wax, a process which it is claimed, prevents the stone from chipping and wasting away.

About 7 o'clock last night, while he was intoxicated, he endeavored to rush past the workmen, just after 7 P.M. He had wanted to get on the dock. When he could not pass the dock, he climbed up on the string-pieces and tried to get over on the dock, fell over, and was struck by one of the crew, who had uttered the threat. I received a blow across the nose, I received a blow across the nose, and my brother Thomas came to my assistance.

Thomas was knocked down, and then I used my club and beat Lee towards the station, and then down by some one of the crowd, but when it was I don't know.

In the corner of South Fifth avenue I was again tripped up, and the crowd tried to take Lee away. The reserves came along about that time from the 12th and 13th Streets.

Douglas' appearance did not belie his story. His nose was swollen and bleeding, and his eye was black.

His face was cut and there were lumps in several places on his head. His legs were black and blue about the knees, picked, he claimed, that the crowd had kicked and bruised him while tripping him.
